2017 FAS ANNUAL MEETING

The Archaeology Lab at the University of North Florida (UNF), with the support of the Jacksonville Society of the Archaeology Institute of America, is honored to host the meeting presentations and related events on the UNF campus May 5-7, 2017. Situated amid woodlands, beautiful lakes, and nature trails, UNF lies within 10 miles of both the Atlantic Ocean and Downtown Jacksonville.

The conference hotel is the Sheraton Jacksonville, located near the St. Johns Town Center and within a few miles of the UNF campus. They offer a special conference rate of $99 per night, available until April 13, 2017, although subject to availability.

Registration for the annual meeting is now open. Please visit the FAS website for registration options. The general cost is $50 and a student rate of $20 is also available. These prices are good until March 17, 2017, after which late registration fees go into effect.

On Friday evening, the Welcome Reception will take place in an open courtyard adjacent to the UNF Archaeology Lab (Building 51). Displays showcasing Jacksonville’s archaeology are courtesy of the Archaeology Lab, Jacksonville Museum of Science and History (MOSH), National Park Service’s Timucuan Ecological and Historic Preserve, and Big Talbot Island State Park. Our featured exhibit will include artifacts from the Mill Cove Complex, a St. Johns II mound center and village (AD 900-1250). Drinks and light hors d'oeuvres will be available.

Paper and poster presentations will take place all day Saturday, May 6, on the UNF campus. Papers will be 20 minutes long and a full day with several presentations per time block are expected.

The Saturday night banquet will be held at the Adam W. Herbert University Center, which overlooks a nature preserve lake. The menu looks great.

Dr. Jim Dunbar, one of the foremost authorities on paleoIndians in Florida and the broader southeast, will serve as Keynote Speaker. Jim was an archaeologist for the Florida Bureau of Archaeological Research for more than 35 years. He is also the founder of the Aucilla Research Institute, Inc. Given that underwater prehistoric sites are coming under attack by the antiquities market and those who want to pass legislation so they can sell artifacts, Dr. Dunbar asks, “Why does Florida have so many inundated archaeological and paleontological sites and what about their significance?” His presentation will focus on the significance of underwater and wetland sites in Florida and the need for their protection.

On Sunday morning, conference attendees will have three tour options that include visiting Grand Shell Ring archaeological site on state owned on Big Talbot Island, viewing historic Kingsley Plantation, Ft. George Island, belonging to the National Park Service, or taking a guided tour to the Mandarin Museum and Historical Society’s Maple Leaf exhibit.

Online abstract submission and registration for presenters is due by Monday, March 13, 2017.
FPAN—FLORIDA PUBLIC ARCHAEOLOGY NETWORK

As always FPAN has many activities coming up and these can be found by visiting one of their many social media sites. If you are visiting other areas in the state, check the regional FPAN sites for other activities. You won’t be disappointed! There WILL be something going on wherever you travel in Florida.
